A CHINESE passenger by the S. S.
Alameda died of apoplexy, on the 3rd inst. The body was buried, and on its arrival here was interred.

THE two mile skating race at the rink Saturday night between Fiji, Napoleon, and Antone, was won by the last named. Hartman did not race.

ONE hundred and twenty-two Chinese immigrants arrived by the Zealandia this morning, and twenty-two by the bark Livingstone the other day.

PHOTOGRAPHS of the King of Bavaria lying in State reached Honolulu by the mail Saturday night. The pictures referred to were sent to a resident Bavarian gentleman.

PEOPLE residing in the neighborhood of Fort and Kukui streets complain of a horse, stabled on Fort street, next house to Mr. Wagner's.
This animal has the habit of kicking nearly all night, and keeping people awake.

MR. T. M. Henderson, at Hollister's, received the sad news, by the Alameda, of the death of his aged father Mr. William Henderson. Deceased was a resident of Montreal, and had attained the ripe age of 72 years.

THE San Francisco "Morning Call," July 23, says: "Captain R. W. Laine, of Honolulu, is at the Lick House.
John Cummings, one of the largest planters of the Sandwich Islands, accompanied by his family, arrived in the Zealandia yesterday."

THE local groceries are all blooming with fruit to-day. The establishments of McIntyre & Co., C. H. Hus-tace, H. May & Co., Wolfe & Co., Levis & Co. and Davis & Wilder, all have a market street appearance, the fruit, for the most part, looking remarkably fresh.

CAPTAIN Hubbard, of the Calbar-ien, keeps on board a remarkable kind of butter, with which he treats his particular friends when they visit him at meal time. This butter is prepared by some peculiar process, which the Captain retains as a secret not to be divulged to anyone!

CAPTAIN A. W. Pierce and wife are yet in California. They thought of returning to Honolulu by the Zean-landia, but at the last moment concluded to remain and see the G. A. R. celebrations, with the hopes of meeting Eastern friends. The captain and his wife have intimated their intention of coming home by the next steamer.

MR. John Eagan, who, several months ago, was employed in the Temple of Fashion, and who returned to the States not long ago, arrived here this morning by the S. S.
Zealandia, with a well selected stock of goods for retailing. Mr.
Eagan will open a first class store on the corner of Fort and Merchant streets, the latter part of this week.

THE Rev. E. C. Oggel and Mrs.
Oggel returned on Saturday, from a very pleasant month's vacation at Waikapu, Maui. Mr. Oggel conducted the services at the Lyceum, yesterday, morning and evening. It was noted that the day was the first of the reverend gentlemen's third year in the pastorate of the Bethel Union Congregation.

SMOKE was visible yesterday at Makiki, which induced people to think there was fire at the bottom.
And so there was. It was at the Cemetery in that neighborhood, and was unintentionally caused by some Chinese while performing religious ceremonies over the graves of their deceased friends. Some grave enclosures were destroyed before the fire was extinguished.

SATURDAY afternoon, while the bark Calbarien was discharging bricks, one of them fell out of the tub when in mid-air, and struck one of the crew on top of the head. The sailor was knocked senseless by the blow. Blood began to flow from the ears of the wounded man, when he was taken to the Hospital. He was resting well yesterday, but the wound, it is feared, will result seriously.

Mrs. St. Clair's buggy was broken to splinters yesterday afternoon. She was paying a visit to a sister of Mr.
E. B. Thomas, at the latter's residence, and had given her team in charge of the servant man, when the smash-up occurred. The servant had only taken off the bridle when the animal bolted. He ran around the yard with great speed, striking the buggy against every obstacle, until it was broken to splinters by striking a heavy cart.

MAKING ice-cream by steam is a process that can be seen at any time, in the Pioneer Steam Candy Factory and Bakery, Hotel street. A cylinder containing the ingredients is revolved 800 times a minute within the chamber. A beater revolving in an opposite direction in the mass gives the result a fineness of grain that distinguishes it agreeably from handmade cream. Pure cream and milk, with a liberal admixture of eggs, form the ingredients of Horn's steam ice-cream, which is rapidly receiving due celebrity.

By the Alameda Saturday night and the Zealandia this morning, Messrs. Lewis & Co. received a splendid lot of fruit, fish, and vegetables.

The fruit and vegetables look as fresh and nice as if gathered this morning. Several varieties of grapes, including muscats, taste as nice as they look. Freestone peaches, of large size and pretty appearance, are luscious to the palate. Fine egg plants, hectarines, pears, and other kinds of fruit make the eyes of children, old and young, sparkle with delight. A connoisseur, who had been sampling, was heard to remark, "these are the best peaches I have tasted in this country."

DEAR SIR:—It gives me pleasure to state to you, that those 3 artistic ornamented Wedding and Bridal Cakes which you made on my order for Capt. Alhorn's Wedding at Lihuue, Kauai arrived in good condition and were admired by everybody present for beautiful design of ornaments and more so for the rich quality and fine flavor of the cake itself. Yours truly, W. F. GLADE.

DEATH OF HERMAN FAUTH.

Herman Fauth, mate of the steamer Kilaua Hou, of the Wilder S. S. Co., dropped dead at the Pali yesterday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs.
Fauth, accompanied by the mate of the bark Post Bismarck, rode out to the Pali in a buggy. They had hitched the team at the bottom of the hill, and were standing by the iron railing on the summit of the Pali, when Fauth suddenly fell backwards to the ground, striking his head against a projecting stone and causing a wound that bled profusely. There being no signs of consciousness, and the mate of the Bismarck not being able to resuscitate the injured man, assistance was looked for. While the mate of the Bismarck was on his way to the nearest house Mr. A. F. Cooke appeared, and on examining Mr.
Fauth found him to be dead. After a while other people arrived at the Pali, and with their assistance the body was taken to the residence of Mr.
C. M. Cooke, where proper conveyance was obtained to bring the body to Honolulu. Mrs. Fauth was driven home in a buggy, while the remains of her deceased husband were taken to the undertaker's. A post mortem examination was held this morning by Drs. McWayne and Webb, who report that the death of Mr. Fauth was caused by heart disease. Herman Fauth was born in Barth, Germany, in the year 1844. He came to these islands a year or so ago, and was appointed chief officer of the steamer Kilaua Hou in April, 1885. He was married about a year ago, and now leaves a young widow to mourn his loss. A subscription list is being circulated among the employees of the Wilder S. S. Co.'s to raise funds for the bereaved widow. The flags of the Wilder S.
S. Co.'s steamers are at half-mast in respect for the deceased mate.
The funeral takes place this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, from the late residence, Queen street.

TRIAL OF MICHELIS.

ARGUMENT OF COUNSEL.

On the Court resuming at 1:30 Saturday afternoon, Mr. Neumann asked leave to make a motion for the admission of rebuttal testimony on behalf of the defense. He had heard during the recess that Ah Choy had acquaintance with Wong Tai Poon, which he denied in his evidence.
The Attorney-General objected to the motion, as he did not see any relevancy in the matter, and the prosecution had closed its case before recess at the desire of the defense.
Mr. Neumann said that, of course, if the Attorney-General objected, he could not make the motion. He then proceeded with his argument for the defense, beginning with an acknowledgment that the Attorney-General had conducted the prosecution fairly, without going beyond the strict line of his duty.
But he considered the action against his client was premature; that the Marshal and his officers, and even the Attorney-General, had been misled. He held that no case had been made out, but that there was a conspiracy between the officers and Ah Choy for purposes of gain. His only objection had been to the evidence of Good, who seemed to have been carried outside of the witness by his feelings. He had asked Ah-huna if the oath he had taken was as binding as one administered according to the rites of his own religion. It was morally a perjury for a witness to state anything false on the stand whether he considered the oath taken binding or not. The evidence of Ahuna was one tissue of lies from beginning to end. Not a line, or corner, or segment, of it fitted into the story told by Ah Choy. The prosecution had not attempted to fasten the guilt on anyone else, but simply pleaded entire innocence of the ownership of the opium. If Ahuna's statement that no bargain was made on Friday was true, then Ah Choy's was a lie. It was immaterial which of the Chinamen lied; he believed both of them lied. Had they more opportunities of comparing notes, the two men could have constructed a more consistent story. Ah Choy was the greatest benefactor this community had. There had been much wrangling over the question of licensing opium, but when Ah Choy came forward and said he was only influenced by patriotic motives in denouncing their client, the question was solved. With Ah Choy there would be no more smuggling of opium. He reviewed the evidence to show contradiction between Ahuna and Ah Choy, from which he concluded Ahuna's testimony was utterly false. They had not introduced evidence to prove an alibi, but fortunately it turned out that their witnesses had proved that Michiels was not, as Ahuna had sworn, engaged all Friday afternoon in his store reading and writing. Ah Choy skipped out of the store whenever the officers entered.

That was not surprising, as persons engaged in such work did not usually stay long in the place where the work was carried on. Every item in the evidence pointed as direct as the needle to the pole star, to a conspiracy between these Chinamen to put up a job on Michiels. Was it reasonable to suppose that Michiels would make an appointment to deliver opium and receive the money for it, at a certain hour in the morning, and then be found lying in bed at that hour? He had never, in all his experience in this country, known a case to be brought for the unlawful possession of opium upon such flimsy evidence as this one.

The Marshal had doubtless told the truth, when he said he saw Michiels going to the Post Office, but yet there was not a particle of evidence that Michiels met Ah Choy in his store that afternoon. Could any man in his senses believe that their client would have, in full view of such a thronged thoroughfare as Fort street, dived under his counter and, pulling out a tin of opium, hold it aloft to show to Ah Choy. Commenting on the importance that attached to the time at which each step of the defendant had been made, he asked why it was that the prosecution had produced no evidence of Government officers regarding the time when Ah Choy laid his information at the Government building. In conclusion he claimed that there was no evidence to convict his client; that nothing outside of the offense charged could be brought forward against his client; that guilty knowledge had not been proved against the defendant, as must have been done to secure conviction; that guilt must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, but there had been no proof to that effect except the testimony of Ahuna and Ah Choy, who both had evidently premeditated; that a mere preponderance of evidence was not sufficient to convict, and that defendant's word was as good as that of either of those two Chinese; that the proof presented must not only be consistent with the guilt of defendant, but be inconsistent with every other theory; that the Court was sitting in the position of a jury, who must give the defendant the benefit of any reasonable doubt.
It was the disposition of many in the community to believe the worst regarding any man's character, but it was unnecessary to ask this Court to pay no attention to rumor.
He cited Sir William Blackstone in the sentiment that smuggling was only a slight misdemeanor, a venial offense, and claimed an acquittal on the ground that no case had been made out against the defendant of having opium in possession.

Attorney-General Dare claimed the prosecution had been conducted as a judicial enquiry. Counsel had complained that the prosecution had not worked up their case properly.
Hereafter he would submit all his cases to Mr. Neumann for approval.
Then counsel was disturbed over Wong Tai Poon. One would think he had been overtaken by a typhoon at some time, which upset his gut and scattered his papers, and had been ever since haunted by a typhoon.
The prosecution had not brought Tai Poon in, but that character had been dragged into Court by the defense. The latter had tried to fasten him on to their witnesses, but had failed. On returning to Court from lunch he was much disturbed to know what line of argument the well-known ingenuity of counsel would adopt. It proved to be an assertion of falsehood against the witnesses for the prosecution. What else could it be? Did anyone ever see a lawyer defending a case without trying to make the witnesses out as liars? The defense acknowledged that Soper was to be believed, and Soper's evidence proved a portion at least of the testimony of Ah Choy to be true. With reference to the imputation of conspiracy, the Attorney-General argued that it was absurd. There was no attempt to show revenge as a motive for conspiracy; while, if reward was the object, it was unlikely to suppose that Chinamen would invest $296 in 37 tins of opium, for the sake of half the fine, which would be $25. That was not the way Chinamen did business.

The silent evidence of the valise was more eloquent than words, and it was shown that when defendant entered the store he walked straight to the valise and kicked it, then turned to his servant who had served him faithfully for seven years and tried to fasten the guilt on him. Mr.
Dare reviewed the evidence as to time given for the movements of that afternoon, to show discrepancies in the evidence for the defense.
A white man watching for the purpose swore to Ah Choy entering defendant's store at a time when the testimony for the defense proved defendant was there. As to "reasonable doubt," it must rest upon the evidence, and if the evidence was any reasonable doubt in the evidence in this case, he would like to have it pointed out. As the attempt to prove an alibi had failed, it was not worth while to refer to it.

Mr. Neumann said the alibi evidence had shown that Ahuna was not telling the truth when he said the defendant was in the store all the afternoon.
Mr. Dare said that the strongest evidence was not that which agreed in the minutest details. It was the testimony of conspirators which could not be shaken on cross-examination. He concluded by saying that the quality of mercy did not rest in this Court. It stood between the people and the accused to administer justice on the evidence produced. If the defendant was guilty let the strong arm of the law fall upon him, though he were a king; but if innocent let him go free though he were the meekest beggar on earth.
Justice Bickerton remarked on the large quantity of evidence, of which he had taken notes, and several authorities kindly looked up for his consideration by counsel, and remanded the case for judgment, till Wednesday morning next.

SOCIAL FLIRTS.

A nervous person, takes B. a lady for whom he has long cherished feelings of affection, down to dinner. By dint of many mixed liquors he screws himself up to the point of asking her to become his wife. No sooner are the words out of his mouth than his attention is distracted by a pointed question addressed to him by someone seated opposite; owing to which interruption he fails to gather the nature of B's response, whispered at the moment when the hostess gives the signal for the ladies to withdraw.
When A rejoins them, B has left.
What should A do?

THE SCIENCE OF BILLIARDS.

A noble lord, addicted to billiards, and already very scientific on the board of green cloth, yet now and then coming off number two in friendly contests, desired to steal a march on his friends, and so wrote to Roberts, the champion billiard player, asking for an appointment to take lessons. Roberts replied that he was engaged at a guinea an hour every day until the 26th of May next. It is evident that a lucrative calling is opening up for the rising generation, and we may find the learned professions rivalled in popularity, if not by the science of the cue.
